HIP REPLACEMENT SURGERY

Hip Replacement Surgery

Total Hip replacement surgery is performed most commonly because of progressive arthritis in the hip joint. The most common type of arthritis leading to a hip replacement is osteoarthritis. It is important you discuss with your doctor your options. Here are some possible indications that hip replacement is needed:

- Hip/groin pain that keeps you awake at night.
- Hip pain that limits activities that are necessary for your daily activities of living.
- You have tried other treatments recommended and your pain still persists.

Prior to deciding on surgery, your doctor and surgeon will also consider other factors such as overall health, bone density etc. Hip replacement surgery can offer an end to joint pain, can improve mobility and lead to a better quality of life.

Hip Replacement Rehabilitation

Nowadays due to advancements in surgery and involvement of allied health professionals, patients will be discharged home 4 -5 days after their surgery. Rehabilitation after a hip replacement is very important. It is essential to comply with your hip precautions, as taught to you in hospital, to ensure full healing can be achieved and avoid the risk of dislocating your new hip. This total hip replacement pack can help. Together, these items will relieve you of unnecessary reaching and stretching that may cause injury. All items can be ordered over the phone and delivered to your home in advance of your surgery.
